K Kids care

Leila Giacomarro, a member of Kensington Intermediate School K-Club service group, is a picture of concentration, as she gathers veggies for the Rocky River Assistance Program food pantry. The third-through fifth-graders sorted 4,000 cans of nonperishable food which were collected at drop-off points like the Rocky River Public Library during the "Food for Fines" program in March. The number of cans was up 2,500 from last year's total. (West Life photo by Sue Botos)
